A JARRING CONCEPT

Mason jars may remind us of grandma's homemade jam; but these days they're serving a much broader purpose, with DIYers bringing the canning essential into all kinds of home décor. Bluemotif Architecture took it a step further with a Mason jar wall at Prepkitchen in Little Italy. "The design was meant to convey the feeling of wandering off the street and into someone's home," Bluemotif founder Matthew Ellis says. Acting as succulent terrariums, the jars are set into pipe collars attached to a panel of recycled parota wood. Holes drilled into the wood provide places to intersperse light bulbs that add even more function.
